The crime for which Gurley is to pay the death penalty was committed on April 30, 1901. He had been living with Rosle Higgins, a negress. He treated her cruelly and she left him. He attempted to induce her to return to him. She refused. Then, drawing a razor, he slashed right and left. Morguekeeper Cowie declared that the woman's body was cut from head to foot. He declared that he had never seen a more mutilated body.

Gurley was arrested soon after his crime. He was tried and found guilty. The Supreme Court sustained the finding of the lower court. Governor Dockery granted one respite of thirty days. He refused to interfere further. Health. Commissioner Starkloff, in compli-ance with the motion adopted by the board, will prepare the notices for submission at the next meeting.

Yesterday was "groundhog day," and, according to tradition, the little animal came out of the hole in which he had sheltered himself during the winter season to take observations regarding the weather in store for the next six weeks.

The tradition has it that if the groundhog, frisking about after his long retreat, observes upon the earth his own shadow, cast by the sun's rays, he becomes frightened, as the shadow portends a continuation of wintry weather for six weeks more, and he straightway darts back to his burrow. If he does not see his shadow he remains without, which is taken as an indication that baimy weather will succeed the gales of winter and usher in an early spring. If the groundhog that inhabits this vicinity came out yesterday he did not remain long, and if there is any truth in the tradition St. Louisans are in for another season of overcoats and coal bills. The sun shone steadily throughout the entire day, although the air was damp and chilly enough to remind one not to forget overcoats and wips. Doctor Hyatt predicts that to-day will be much colder, with probable rain or snow flurries. The widow of the late Major General Justus P. McKinstry was yesterday committed to the Insane Asylum.

Schumann-Heink at the Odeon last night was one of the notable music events of the year in St. Louis, which season has produced more really good music than has ever been the case before. The voice of the great German singer was in excellent condition, and every detail of the concert combined to make an artistic and music success.

That the audience was pleased with the work of the soloist was demonstrated by the fact that she was called out several times after her last number, and no one left until she responded with an encore. For

All of Mme. Schumann-Henk's numbers were sung in German. They were chosen evidently with the view of giving her an opportunity to display the scope and numerous admirable qualities of her rich soprano voice. Of these qualities it is difficult to decide which is most pleasing. By far the most striking is the dramatic quality. The voice is filled with wonderful sweetness and sympathy. sweetness and sympathy.

The final number, an aria from Saint-Saens's "Samson and Dellia," one of the most attractive numbers, was sung with great taste and feeling, Other numbers were "Frauenliebe und Leben," by R. ceive a notice from the Health Commis-

Every householder of St. Louis will receive a notice from the Health Commissioner to the effect that they must obey the law in respect to providing proper receptacles for their garbage and placing them where they can be handled conveniently by the collectors.

This action was decided upon at yesterday's meeting of the Board of Health, and was the result of a suggestion offered by Mayor Wells, who presided at the meeting. President Hornsby of the City Council, an ex-officio member of the board, put the Mayor's suggestion in the form of a motion, which was adopted.

PROVISIONS OF ORDINANCE.

The city ordinance gives the Board of Health authority to request at any time from the company holding the garbage contract a sworn statement of the number of men, wagons and teams employed by the company in the collection of the garbage, with the privilege of hiring additional men, wagons and teams at the contractor's expense, in the event the latter has not a sufficient number in his employ.

The question of whether the Excelsion Hauling and Transfer Company has enough garbage wagons to do the work was raised by License Collector Clifford several weeks ago, when the company took out licenses. Mr. Clifford claimed the company has more wagons than the number for which licenses were purchased, and he called the Mayor's attention to the matter.

The notice to the householders will be printed in the form of circulars and will be delivered to every house in the city by the Police Department.

The law requires that every family must use a proper receptacle for the temporary storage of garbage while awaiting the visit of the collector and that the receptacle must be kept within a certain number of feet from the alley.

MUST HAVE RECEPTACLES.

There was complaint last summer about the manner in which the garbage was being neglected by the collectors. When the contractor was asked for an explanation, he claimed the householders were not obeying the law by placing receptacles in the alleys.

JAPAN ASSIGNED A SITE.

Director of Works Sets Apart Loca-Through Director of Works Taylor, the Exposition management has announced that a location has been assigned to the Japanese Government for the erection of its national building, on the hill overlooking the Mines and Metaliurgy building.

In the event the location is entirely satisfactory to the Japanese Commission, the members of that body intend to reproduce one of the finest types of temples or castles in Japan, with some of that country marvelous garden effects.

Chairman Jushiro Kuichi said last night that he had not as yet received official notification that the hill had been assigned to them, but Mr. Taylor stated that the decision had been made, and that the commission would probably be notified to-day.

If Japan carries out her plans by building either the Castle of Nogayo or the Temple of Niko on the hill, her location will be on the same elevation occupied by Germany, although considerably east of the Kalser's pavilion and not far from the United States Government building.

A natural depression on the extreme eastern part of the site set apart for the Government of the Mikado. will serve to enable the commission to introduce some of the most picturesque landscaping found in that Kingdom. It is known in a general way from conversations held with the Japanese Commissioners at various times that her representation at the World's Fair will far surpass anything she has ever attempted at an exposition.
